

Lawyers happy to do the leg work

While Webb Ross Lawyers has an extremely long history of service in Northland dating back to the 1930s, the partners and their huge legal team are still young enough to kick up their heels with the best of them.

Spectators standing at the hair-pin during the recent Dargaville Gutbuster, (sponsored by Webb Ross), would have spotted the new Webb Ross premises tucked between ANZ and the Roast Shop at 109 Victoria Street.

They would have also have seen the Webb Ross race team giving fellow competitors a good run for their money. Senior Lawyer David Grindle and Clerk Gina Wadsworth took an early lead but lost control, though they did impress the crowd with a series of spectacular stunt manoeuvres. Partner Wayne McKean and Associate Rob Harte burned some serious tread but despite an impressive run did not take the race.

Partner Roger Bell quips “we understand that for many of our clients it’s a race against time and that it’s not always convenient to get someone to take care of the farm so they can head to Whangarei to sort their legal matters”.

And the time saved in travel can be better spent focusing on details. Partner Stuart Spicer reckons that in a climate where matters like employment contracts and occupational health and safety procedures are increasingly complex “it’s more important than ever to get the right advice”. Born and bred in Whangarei, Stuart has a wealth of experience in contract negotiation.

Managing Partner Wayne McKean agrees and says “that applies to all areas of your business. Farm succession, resource management and asset protection are all hot topics at the moment and some good advice now can save a lot of grief later”.

Fourth partner Steve Wong explains that because Webb Ross is a large firm they can provide specialist advice in whatever area of the law you need help with. “It’s a bit like going into hospital for a bypass operation. The guy who does ear, nose and throat operations probably knows a thing or two about hearts but if you’re going under the knife, you’d rather have an expert who’s done the procedure a thousand times before”.

The Partners and their Senior Lawyers operate from their new premises on a rostered basis and can access additional expertise from the Whangarei office as required.

For more photos of the Gutbuster action see the posters displayed in the window of Webb Ross, 109 Victoria Street.

Worried it might hit the fan?

We’ve got loads of experience with asset protection

webb ross
LAWYERS
Innovation | Leadership | Performance

109 Victoria St, Dargaville 09 439 8001 www.webbross.co.nz

Lawyers happy to do the leg work

While Webb Ross Lawyers has an extremely long history of service in Northland dating back to the 1930s, the partners and their huge legal team are still young enough to kick up their heels with the best of them.

Spectators standing at the hair-pin during the recent Dargaville Gutbuster, (sponsored by Webb Ross), would have spotted the new Webb Ross premises tucked between ANZ and the Roast Shop at 109 Victoria Street.

They would have also have seen the Webb Ross race team giving fellow competitors a good run for their money. Senior Lawyer David Grindle and Clerk Gina Wadsworth took an early lead but lost control, though they did impress the crowd with a series of spectacular stunt manoeuvres. Partner Wayne McKean and Associate Rob Harte burned some serious tread but despite an impressive run did not take the race.

Partner Roger Bell quips “we understand that for many of our clients it’s a race against time and that it’s not always convenient to get someone to take care of the farm so they can head to Whangarei to sort their legal matters”.

And the time saved in travel can be better spent focusing on details. Partner Stuart Spicer reckons that in a climate where matters like employment contracts and occupational health and safety procedures are increasingly complex “it’s more important than ever to get the right advice”. Born and bred in Whangarei, Stuart has a wealth of experience in contract negotiation.

Managing Partner Wayne McKean agrees and says “that applies to all areas of your business. Farm succession, resource management and asset protection are all hot topics at the moment and some good advice now can save a lot of grief later”.

Fourth partner Steve Wong explains that because Webb Ross is a large firm they can provide specialist advice in whatever area of the law you need help with. “It’s a bit like going into hospital for a bypass operation. The guy who does ear, nose and throat operations probably knows a thing or two about hearts but if you’re going under the knife, you’d rather have an expert who’s done the procedure a thousand times before”.

The Partners and their Senior Lawyers operate from their new premises on a rostered basis and can access additional expertise from the Whangarei office as required.

For more photos of the Gutbuster action see the posters displayed in the window of Webb Ross, 109 Victoria Street.

Worried it might hit the fan?

We’ve got loads of experience with asset protection

webb ross
LAWYERS
Innovation | Leadership | Performance

109 Victoria St, Dargaville 09 439 8001 www.webbross.co.nz

